

entire program; others differ with it, on one point or another. But those differences of agreement should always be manifested with responsibility and out of a constructive purpose, aiming only at the common good and the furtherance of basic human values.

In any event, we should be ready—all of us, from the President down to the least citizen—to show our seriousness, to work hard and produce more, not seeking first and foremost what profits us as individuals, or our particular party, but keeping in view the common good.

Finally, as Christians, we believe that the risen Saviour is the supreme force in history. Any progress in freedom, any strengthening of dialogue, any fulfillment of man will be growth in the total Christ. His kingdom may reach us in ways that will upset us, but we look for its unerring advance. May this faith and hope of ours be evidenced by our ardent and generous work.
